

Hialeah Paper Doll

DONNA LARSEN makes an attractive picture for this week's Record. She's had lots of experience posing for pictures as she is a graduate of Charmette Modeling Academy and often models in her spare time. A senior, Donna's spare time is limited as she is a member of F.H.A., Y-Teens, and Theatricals.

Racing Season Resumes-- Citizens Take to Hills!

It's that time of year again. Hialeah wakens from its deadening daily routine and comes alive with visitors and the wackiest crowd in the world.

Hialeah Race Course opens and draws its usual ten thousand people away from their otherwise hum-drum day.

No matter how many people say that "Betting is senseless," over five thousand cars jam the track and streets around it.

Students driving home from school find themselves bumper to bumper with the most determined drivers around. The gentlemen that just have to make the featured seventh race.

For miles around, you will see tickets, programs, and bottles cluttering the highways. Money returns and business is prosperous. Motels and hotels are filled to capacity, restaurants are crammed with fans reading "The Racing Form."

Two-thirds of every sports section of the newspapers is filled with news of the "Sport Of Kings."

All in all--this is probably irritating to the teenage set, but remember the old slogan--"Keep Hialeah Green--Bring Money." These people are just giving the businessmen of Hialeah that pleasure.

Troublesome Trio Is Spotted

Attention! Hialeah High Students! Last-minute Flanagan, Dismal Daisy, and Know-it-all Magoo were last seen headed toward Hialeah High School. If you look carefully, you may be able to spot them.

Flanagan will probably be easiest to spot. On exam day he will come charging into the classroom with papers flying from his notebook, then he will jump into his seat, throw open his books and begin to squeeze a semester's work into the five minutes before class begins.

Dismal Daisy, on the other hand, will come moping into the classroom, flop into her seat and woefully state that she positively cannot pass this test. Too bad Daisy didn't hear the speech Mr. Mohr gave on testing in which he stressed among other things the need of positive thinking.

Know-it-all Magoo will enter the room, swagger over to Dismal Daisy and say, "I see you are going to fail the test. To bad; I feel sorry for you but I warned you when you entered this class that you'd never make it." Then to Last-minute Flanagan he will say, "Don't tell me you have to study? Why I didn't even have to take home a book. This class is a snap."

Needless to say all three failed the test with flunking colors. Why did they fail? They failed because of negative thinking, over confidence, and lack of proper preparation.

Notes From The Record

By Brenda Wooton

Certain students trade courses, with the second semester right around the corner. Psychology students enter sociology and vice-versa. All driving students will be taking the new change in driver's education, which will affect the whole school, since first period will be at 8:30 till 9:45 and then home-room for 15 minutes and then on to second period.

SCHOLARSHIPS DISCUSSED:

Mr. Robert Mohr urges all students interested in college scholarships and their per cent on the qualifying tests see him immediately. Also if any questions concerning scholarships, requirements, money situations, may be arising in your mind, he will be glad to help discuss them with you. 105 is the magic room number where he may be found.

PROUD OF:

The Hialeah High band has something to be proud of. Their snappy uniforms and smooth music was really terrific in the Orange Bowl parade.

We're Proud to Print This!

January 6, 1959

Dear Mrs. Miller,

I would like to compliment you and your staff for an extra good issue of the "Hialeah Record." David Ryan should be especially complimented on his interesting sports column. It is the best ever and seems to be of professional quality. Keep up the good work.

Sincerely,

DON GORMAN

Keep Those Resolutions

Another year comes and as usual people make their New Year's resolutions, but as the year progresses the resolutions are forgotten. These little self promises are sort of the new standards we set up for our own improvement, but somehow put off and forget until another year rolls around.

If you should find yourself putting off one of the resolutions or if you totally throw the resolution aside, pick it up again and remember that's the improvement you yourself set.

Make your first resolution for the up-and-coming 1959 season that you resolve to keep your resolutions, because they're for your betterment.

Projects and Reputation

School projects help to further the reputation of Hialeah School.

In order for these projects to be successful, each person must put forth a little effort and do everything he can to support the projects and drives.

The various organizations of H.H.S. have drives not only to raise money but also to help people of our community. These projects help further the good name of our school.

When tag sales, candy sales, bake sales, and other fund raising projects take place, support them, for the support and added effort you provide show adults and other schools that our students are a unit working together for the benefit of all.

My Senior Year

By Judy Foster

The time approaches when I will leave My school with deep regret. I cannot truthfully say I'll grieve But many things I'll not forget.

I've had to struggle to reach the goal (I never thought I'd make it) But make it I did and bless their souls I've given some teachers a fit.

Without their patience I'd still be here Another four years I'm sure, But teachers you don't need to fear I'm heading for the door.

Jobs For Women Are Plentiful

When you have the job you want "you're sitting on top of the world." Maybe your goal is an absorbing homemaking career with marriage and children or the whirlwind life of a Jack-of-all-trades in a one-girl office.

If it's the job you want it's really not work at all. It's fun! You use all your abilities, call on every part of your brain for help, meet interesting people, and above all, learn something new every day.

Of course, the first thing to keep in mind when considering any career is your own temperament. Your likes and dislikes; what you want out of life--or better yet, what you are willing to put into it.

Next, explore the job which you have set your heart on so that you don't go out blindly during summer vacations or the day after graduation to look for "any job."

Start early, while there's still time, to study the requirements for that job, the education necessary, and the abilities and skills it demands. When you begin to think about vocations, you will come across a great variety of jobs in a great many fields.

Talk to your guidance counselor or people who have taken State or Federal Service training. You will soon discover that suitable and attractive jobs for women aren't confined to a few narrow fields.

Thousands of jobs are listed by the United States census that you may not know about, but never lose sight that the "greatest career is Homemaking."

The job of holding a family and home together through all the pressure of modern life is a tough one and more challenging than any other. It's one vocation that calls on every skill and resource you can muster!

Desks Receive Much Abuse

Do you ever feel it is insignificant and much less trouble to write on a desk top than to open your notebook for a sheet of paper?

If your answer is yes, you can learn a lesson from observation. Take a look at the desk at which you are seated and examine it for figures, initials, lines, pictures, and other forms of artistic pencil work. Almost invariably, you'll find markings all over the top.

The underside of the same desk is, no doubt, a branch of the chewing gum graveyard--where wads of that adhesive material rest in peace!

How has this come about?

Some students scribble on the desk-tops because they think that there is nothing better to do. Others think they should have some sort of recognition and feel justified in scribing their initials and names into the desks. As a last resort before being caught with chewing gum in class, some pupils will occasionally slap the gum underneath the desk where it will avoid detection.

The best way to curb the defacing of school property is through the thoughtfulness of each student. Take the extra moment or so to get some scratch paper instead of scribbling on the desk. Dispose of chewing gum before class so that you won't have a chance to "gum up the works." Form your own resolution and help remind your fellow students to break the habit.

If our schools can be kept in shape, so can our communities!

Cold Germs Bug Us Again

Cold chills and chattering teeth are here again. Are you worried that you might catch cold and miss some of that week-end fun? If you do catch a cold don't go blaming it on your friends or parents because they may have one.

Have you considered why so many people catch colds? It's because their resistance is low and they can't fight the cold germ off when it hits. It's not hard to try and beat the cold germ at his own game. Just remember a few simple rules and you will enjoy your week-end fun, with energy and good health.

First keep your body warm, but not too warm, for example, going from a hot room out into the cold air then back in again. Remember to get plenty of rest and body building foods. Eat a good breakfast before dragging out of the house in the morning. Be smart and remember an apple a day will keep the doctor away, and perhaps those winter invaders, the cold germ.

Why Some Students Leave School

Amid moans and groans the teacher finished calling out the grades from a stiff Biology exam.

"Only one out of every three Sophomores will graduate from high school," the instructor told the class.

Everyone glanced around, the answer was written on every face. And yet there were questions in some bright young eyes.

Why will only one graduate? There are many reasons all the way from marriage, illness, and supporting the family to just plain getting kicked out of school.

Why is a student asked to leave school? Here are some examples: Ned, he's a cat from way back. Black jacket and all the other accessories well dressed hood will wear. He talks in class, never does a stitch of work and disrupts the class constantly. Sound familiar?

Then there is Will. He can't make a go of it. He has come back after quitting three times. "I try," he says. But how hard? Helen is different from the rest and yet her fate will be the same. School is a good place to catch a husband and besides they have to keep me until I'm 16 anyway.

Last but not least is Susan. She has plenty of ability but refuses to use it. Her theory is "If I can make C's and not work, why make A's?"

If you are similar to these students of one kind or another, then wake up and fly right. Education is a pretty wonderful thing. Use it as such.
