

Notes From The Record

By BRENDA WOOTON

I would like to take this opportunity to express my sincere gratitude to the Journalism I and II classes for nominating and electing me their new editor-in-chief of the RECORD. I and my new staff of editors from the advanced journalism class will work diligently throughout the whole semester to produce a paper worth-while to the students and faculty. But as we have found out, the RECORD couldn't and won't be put out without the aid of the reporters in the first year Journalism classes.

Fees Lower:

More parents as well as students are happier this year, now that fees are a bit lower. Last year fees ranged from $4.00 to, in some cases, as high as $20.00. The idea of free-education has certainly changed in the past twenty years, and will change even more in the coming years.

Student Council Ready:

President Dan Harbolt and his newly elected officers are ready, willing, and able to master the problems that arouse the students of H.H.S.

Pictures for the annual have already started being taken. Sophomores, Juniors and Seniors have already started. By November 11th, hope is that all will be taken and finished. As the saying goes, "Say cheese."

Late Lunch Hr. Poses Problems to Students

By WANDA CAPELETTI

Speaking as a "subject" of the late lunch hour crowd, I wish to express myself on our problems. In case you don't know which lunch hour I'm talking about; it is the quarter of one til quarter after, known as the "cold treatment" lunch period.

To begin with, there is always a mile long line to the door, and if you're lucky, your finger will probably be smashed as you go through. Just as we get to the trays, along comes the lady with some nice hot ones. Nothing like a hot tray on a hot day. Now we come to the milk, if there is any left, and just warm enough to melt butter.

By this time everyone is looking forward to the FOOD, FOOD, FOOD . . . Oh well, you settle for a cold plate. In our rush we forget to buy ice cream, so we go through the line again.

Once we gather straws at the first table, napkins at the next, and salt at the last table, we are all set. Now to find a table with chairs. After we are settled, everyone tries to eat in all the hussle bussle.

On the way out of the cafeteria, you drop a few pieces of paper and the custodian looks at you, so you hold up the line to pick up your straw. Suddenly you develop indigestion as you think of the same lunch hour the next day.

Do We Give the Proper Respect to Our Flag?

"Isn't it great to be an American!" (Citizen, that is). But are we? When the first notes of the bugle are heard in morning, are you honestly there? Really at attention, or still daydreaming about that date Friday night or worrying about the test next period?

Can we be good American citizens and still show lack of respect for the symbol that stands for the things we all enjoy and appreciate? Freedom of life, limb, and property doesn't mean we're free from our RESPONSIBILITY to show respect for the flag of the country that guarantees these freedoms!

A lot of our boys have fought and died preserving the honor of that flag, and probably, a lot more will. Let's not let them down!

Newspaper Is of Value to Today's Younger Generation

Moans and groans were emitted from many during the first two weeks of school when the English classes studied the Miami Herald. It appeared that some students considered the newspaper valuable for the comic and sport pages only. Actually, its value is far more significant.

Through careful reading (delving behind the printed lines) and active classroom discussion, important characteristics have been achieved.

Many of today's youth either have been denied the opportunity, or have not tried, to think independently. There is little challenge in reading a comic book or a movie magazine. Yet this is often the literary diet of many teenagers. The newspaper offers this mental challenge, provides the "food for thought," and nourishes this important independence of mind.

In this modern, "space age" of ours, open-mindedness ranks high in the desirable qualities of any educated person. It is necessary to read, or hear, an accurate and objective account in order to see both sides of an issue. Many such accounts fill the pages of a newspaper, in easy-to-read form, for the small price of a nickel. Since both of the aforementioned qualities are necessary for a successful life, without a doubt, the newspaper is invaluable to us for this reason alone.

The teenagers of today are the citizens of tomorrow; through the medium of newspapers, they will be INFORMED citizens. The first taste of news reading creates a thirst for further information concerning local, state, and world events. Knowledge of current events develops the desire to be an informed citizen; informed citizens create a better world.

Seek Out Inscription of School Seal

Just as the American flag symbolizes the spirit of the United States, so does the school seal, Hialeah's symbol of the spirit all Thoroughbreds have: to be the best!

Written on the seal, which is below the center stairwell, we find the words: To seek, to find, to share. That is what our symbol stands for. To seek out knowledge, and continue our search until it is found. And then to share it with our friends, our family, and perhaps, later on, our nation. All this is written upon our seal and placed where we may seek it every day, to be reminded of its significance.

We see it; we respect it by not stepping on it. Perhaps if you're a sophomore, or a new student, you will follow our school tradition. Seek out the seal and share this with all Hialeah Thoroughbreds. Once you see the respect given by others, you too will honor YOUR symbol expressing the true school spirit.

Friendliness Is Our Obligation

Vociferant, yet cheerful "hi's" and hello's" fill the air. This is a sign of students taking time to greet friends. But did anyone notice the shy new students walking slowly down the hall, just waiting for a smile?

New school years bring many new students and added obligations for those who are already familiar with faces and routines in Hialeah High.

The obligation is simple, important, and greatly needed. It requires only a smile, friendly personality, and the desire to go the extra mile to make someone feel that he too is needed by the school you feel a part of.

The inward glow of a school is as good as the outward architectural appearances, only if you, the students, are ready to meet this obligation.

Remember, a smile can change the outlook of a person's day or whole life.

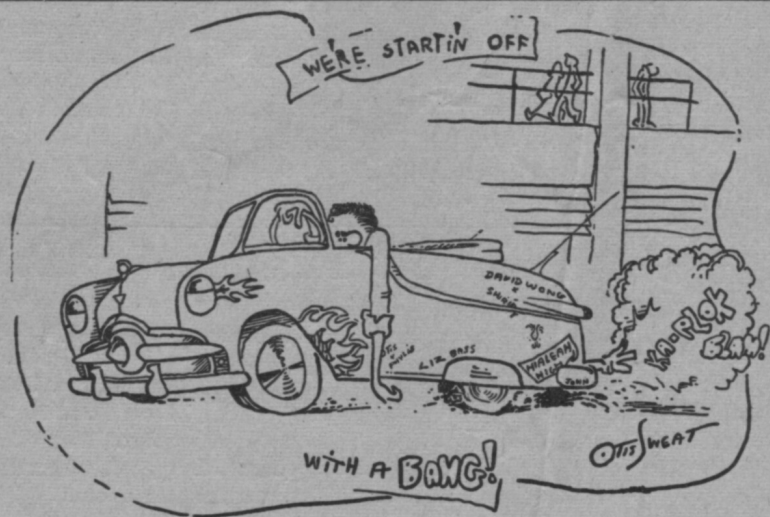

Long Awaited Day Arrives

At long last, the senior year for a lot of the students is here. It seems like yesterday, when girls and boys were entering elementary school, and now after eleven years of hard struggle the dream of being a senior has come true.

For many students, there are more school years to come, but those years will be filled with the expectation and excitement of someday becoming a senior.

The senior year is filled with many joys and a lot of hard work. Being a senior does not mean showing off or being superior to underclassmen. It is being mature and adult enough to be able to accept responsibility and to guide others who are looking up to you.

Seniors, here is a toast and wish for all the best during the senior year as well as the years to come.

Hialeah Paper Doll

PRETTY DELPHINE RIMBERT, who has the honor of being the first Paper Doll of this year, has brains as well as beauty. Always enthusiastic, ever vivacious, "Del's" an expert "voodoo" saleslady as she fills in her duties as vice-president of Anchor. Known for her cheerfulness, she's a true representative of Hialeah High.

He Who Is The Early Bird Is He Who Studies Now

"The early bird gets the worm", is one of the many sayings that could be applied to the fact that we should begin our studying at once. Many of us are guilty of only studying when an important test is coming up. Then we have to cram in one night what should have been learned over a one or two weeks period.

We all know that the student body itself makes up the school. What we do and how we do it, effects the entire school.

For example, take the football team; they practice for weeks before they play the first game. Then, they keep on practicing. A football player would not and could not, go on the field with only one day's practice.

This also applies to the student, although he may pass this test, the information he should have learned will stay with him only a very few days.

It's now the beginning of your school term, and we should start our study habits now. Be sure to keep one thing in mind, a real Thoroughbred never stops trying.

Smoking Is A Privilege

It seems some of the "elite" group, the cigar and cigarette smoking kids of Hialeah High are abusing their privilege of being allowed to smoke at all. We believe in many things, among them "There's a time and a place for everything."

If you must smoke, please do so outside of school property. The time to smoke is not during school hours, and the place is not on or adjacent Hialeah High.

The management rules: "No smoking allowed on school property, sidewalks included during school hours." The management asks that students refrain from smoking on grounds adjacent to school also.

Where our school's reputation is concerned, the management of this school and the editor of this paper feel that this is not an unreasonable request.

No Use Complaining-Numbers Here to Stay

Though we may not like it, the I.B.M. numbers for students and teachers are here to stay.

Actually, by using the number system, our teachers have more time to give aid to those who need help. The I.B.M. will also help our counselors. They'll have extra time to discuss our problems and advise us how to solve them.

Instead of fussing about the numbers, why not use them to your advantage?
